

Telephone Collectors International, Inc. (TCI)

A not-for-profit organization

Telephone Collectors International is an organization of telephone collectors, hobbyists and historians who are helping to preserve the history of the telecommunications industry through the collection of telephones and telephone related material. Our collections represent all aspects of the industry; from the very first wooden prototypes that started the industry to the technological marvels that made the automatic telephone exchange possible.

Membership in the organization is open to anyone with similar interests. We invite you to apply using the membership application inside.

Your membership in the organization includes:

- Subscription to our monthly newsletter "Singing Wires" featuring educational articles and advertisements of telephones and related items
- A Technical Library and other valuable information on our website www.telephonecollectors.org
- Camaraderie between those interested in telephony.
- Opportunity to attend various local and national events sponsored by the organization where you can buy, sell or trade telephone related items
- Invitation to join our open email list server for telephone collectors (a great way to keep up to date through regular communication with other TCI members).
